The Mazy Paths of Divorce.

If some bright literary man would devote a year to following up the divorce tangles that are illustrated in the courts and then summarize in a book the queer features of the suits, I am sure that he would produce a volume that for human interest and popularity could not be surpassed and that would command the widest circle of readers of any book of the times. Give it some such attractive title as "Curiosities of the Divorce Courts," and he would throw the publishers and booksellers in a feverish bustle of activity. The material is ready to his hand, and all the work he would have to perform would be to select the instances that appear most strongly to the sense of the ridiculous, the comic and the pathetic, and tell of them briefly in plain, vigorous English that would be easily understood by the masses. I believe confidently that a book of that kind, holding the mirror up to the perversions of nature, would be a social revelation in which would lie all the possibilities of amusement and sympathy, mixed with a shock that the code of decency should be so violated every day by the men and women of this time of supposed culture and enlightenment.

Of all the matrimonial complications that have lately been brought to light none is more deeply involved in a maze than that of the Dodges and Morzes, which the New York courts are now trying to extricate. Six years ago Mrs. Dodge secured a divorce from her husband and in 1901 she was married to Morze, who is a man of large wealth. In 1903 Dodge concluded that he wanted his wife back, and he obtained an annulment of the decree on the plea that he was not represented in the first proceedings. The woman began a new suit for divorce from her first spouse, and her attorney procured evidence that was conclusive to the referee that Dodge had been represented when the divorce was granted.

Dodge was indicted for perjury and took refuge in Texas. The woman was saved from testifying against him because her lawyers hurried her out of the New York jurisdiction and made her believe that the annulment of the divorce decree would soon be rescinded and she would be free to live with Morze again. Dodge remains in Texas and is said to be living on the money furnished by Morze. District Attorney Jerome, of New York, is endeavoring to have him extradited and he is using Morze's funds to resist the application. It is presumed that there is more crookedness in the case than has yet appeared and that Morze is fearful that it will be revealed if Dodge is forced to appear in a New York court.

The woman, as is generally the rule, is the worst sufferer. She clings to Morze and relies on his wealth to hold Dodge in Texas and to have the annulment of the divorce revoked. The lawyers who represent Dodge have been drawing on Morze to support Dodge, who is not anxious to have the true inwardness of the affair exposed in court. The hypothesis is that the money has overcome the desire that Dodge once manifested to recover his wife and that if he can elude extradition from Texas she will make her home with Morze once more. But the salient point of the whole business is that the lawyers on either side have been instrumental in the trickery and deceit that have marked the case from its inception to its present status.

This litigation would provide the author of "Curiosities of the Divorce Courts" with a lively chapter for his book, but there are plenty of other instances for the exercise of his powers of narrative. In Paterson, N. J., a woman has sued for separation because her husband smokes. In the same State a man brings a suit for the reason that his wife forgot to inform him that she had another husband living. In Indiana a clergyman is suing his wife because she hides his professional coat and collar when he is due in the pulpit.

Perhaps we may find one explanation of the divorce craze in a confession recently made by a young husband who was clandestinely married. He said that he could not afford to for a church wedding, as his business required all his attention. If he could not spare the hours for an open wedding it is a sound proposition that he will be too much absorbed in his occupation to give his wife the attention that is her right and that divorce is almost sure to throw a shadow over their lives.

A rural magistrate the other day established the rule that he would only marry couples who consented to a stipulation that neither would seek for divorce within a year. In the days of "Love's Young Dream" such a reservation seems absurd, but experience has demonstrated that it has its practical uses. The glamor usually outlives a twelvemonth, but the magistrate probably thought that it could restrain a couple from going to court for a year the remembrance of the restriction would influence their future associations and convince them that if they could reconcile their differences during that time a life-

Where do you buy your India Linons?

If you don't buy them at Hartley's you are paying too much for them. Every yard of India linen in this store was bought last year before the great advance in cotton. We know we can save you 20 per cent on India linens. Others will have the same prices as we do, but will the quality be the same? You must look out for that. PRICES RUN 10c, 12 1/2c, 15c, 18c, 20c, 25c, 35c and 50c yard.

OUR INDIA LINONS

Are no better values than the other wash goods in the store, as you will soon find out by paying them a visit.

Elliott School Notes.

Yesterday the students at the Elliott Commercial School organized a literary society. The following officers were elected: President, E. B. Harden; vice-president, R. L. Mason; secretary, Miss Anna Reinheimer; treasurer, Miss Jessie Metheny. Committees were appointed to frame a set of by-laws and to decide upon a name for the society. A great deal of interest was manifested at the organization, and the undertaking is bound to be a success if the same spirit is kept up.

Miss Cora Nixon and Carney Carpenter have recently entered the Short-hand Department.

Principal Crim is out of the city today on business.

Terrence D. Stewart was in the city today.

Bert and Ed. Watkins were at Grafton today.

Mr. A. G. Hall is very sick at his home on Main street.

E. M. Showalter returned from Morgantown at noon.

Dr. C. F. Amos, of Gypsy, was in the city yesterday.

C. L. Michael and J. Guy Prichard came up from Morgantown today.

C. E. Conaway and Chas. Morris returned from Grafton this afternoon.

TURKEY

IS BEING ENTICED TO THE MIKADO OF JAPAN BY LITTLE ATTENTIONS PAID TO THE SULTAN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 7.—The Mikado of Japan is winning Turkey thoroughly over to the Japanese side by little attentions which he is paying the Sultan. The special war telegrams which are being sent are rapidly inculcating in the Turks a pride over the Japanese successes as they consider the brown men fellow associates.

Incidentally, the Mikado has a deeper reason for his attentions, namely, the softening of the Turkish resolve not to let the Russian Black Sea forces pass through the Dardanelles.

THE MARKET.

Things Were Dull At 11 A. M.

NEW YORK, May 7, 11 A. M.—The dullness of the stock may be appreciated when it is stated that in the first hour there were only 33 stocks in which there were transactions of 100 shares or over. The floor was largely deserted and the trading was wholly without significance. Prices as a rule were somewhat drooping, through sheer inertia. In few instances were the variations in excess of one-eighth to one-fourth per cent. The second hour brought no relief from the intense dullness.

Government bonds unchanged.
Other bonds quiet. Total sales 41,600 shares.

BUTLER CITIZENS

DECIDE BY UNANIMOUS VOTE TO PROSECUTE BUTLER WATER COMPANY ON GROUNDS OF CRIMINAL CARELESSNESS.

BUTLER, Pa., May 7.—At a meeting of fifty citizens of this place, all of whom were fever sufferers, held last night, a resolution deciding to prosecute the Butler Water Company was unanimously passed. The meeting was presided over by Attorney J. D. Marshall and Rev. Charles E. Enterline, was secretary. Remarks on the situation were made by Attorney Marshall and Dr. Neeley and the Chairman was instructed to appoint a committee of ten to prepare for the first step of the legal proceedings. The hand of epidemic had made itself felt in the shape of sickness or death in every family represented and those present were very earnest in their desire to make the water company suffer for the calamity which they directly charge to the company's criminal carelessness.

The committee of ten will probably decide who will be the first plaintiff.

WE ARE HAPPY ONCE MORE

THE MAYOR HAS RETURNED; THAT LICENSE IS PAID AND EVERYTHING IS PERFECTLY LOVELY.

We are happy now. The license has been paid for, and His Honor has returned. We knew it would be paid, because did not His Honor so order it? It was a few days late in arriving, but it was good when it got here.

At the license fees have been paid with the exception of a few pool rooms and one hotel, which will be paid this evening, or the places of business will be closed.

SPINNACH SUPPLANTS COTTON.

In Mississippi and Arkansas the Earliest Green Vegetable is in Great Demand.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 7.—Special reports from points in Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana are to the effect that many families have abandoned the planting of cotton for the raising of spinach, the earliest of all green vegetables. The demand in the North, so the producers say, is so great for the spinach that it has surpassed the output.

Between $5,000 and $10,000 is the profits estimated by Dr. W. E. Smith, of Madison county, Miss., for 32 acres of land which he recently planted in spinach.

Found Nothing But the Bridle. Web Amos, of near Rivesville, was in the city yesterday. Last evening when he went to get his horse to go home, he found only the bridle, the horse having broken loose and gone toward home. Mr. Amos had to walk home. This morning the horse was found along the road.
